

San Francisco International Airport

OVERVIEW

With the inauguration of its gleaming new international terminal, San Francisco International Airport is well on its way to being the airport of choice for business travelers, especially those going to Asia. Foreign carriers, soon to begin flying Airbus's massive super-jumbo jets will be welcomed at the six terminal gates which have the ability to handle the A380.

Three-quarters (75.4%) of traffic is domestic and the other 24.6% is international - the largest portion of international passengers is from Asia at nearly half of the total. There are 55 airlines operating at SFO - the two largest being United Airlines and American Airlines.
